第3問

A 次の英文を読んで、後の問いに答えよ。

Four years ago, I brought Jackson, my mixed-breed dog, home the rescue center. He was only two months old, but he was full of energy and already showing his stubborn* character.

While he was still a cute puppy*, my children used to love playing with him and taking him for walks. But since he has grown up and calmed down, they have shown less interest. ㉞He seems to have become just another household chore. There is cleaning their rooms, washing the dishes, helping with the laundry, and walking the dog. The kids seem to complain about all of them.

Although I remind them that they must share the responsibility of looking after Jackson, secretly, I don't mind at all that I have to do most of the dog walking.

Jackson to explore every backstreet* and all the footpaths* in the neighborhood. He is always finding some new route. I never knew how many hidden corners my neighborhood had until he led me down every narrow footpath. He has shown me a secret side of home I would never have found without him.

Also, thanks to Jackson, I now know many more of my neighbors. On our walks we meet so many other dogs and their owners, and ㉟while the dogs get to know each other, we owners end up chatting and sharing the local news.

So, Jackson is not just my grown-up rescue puppy—he's my neighborhood explorer, my social connector and, most of all, he's my friend.

(注) *stubborn = 頑固な

*puppy = 子犬

*backstreet = 裏通り

*footpath(s) = 小道

B 次の英文を読んで、後の問いに答えよ。

Japan's passport is very strong. Japanese tourists can travel to 191 countries without needing to prepare a visa*, which is more than any other nationality. However, as July 2025, only about 21.6 million people in Japan have valid passports. This is just 17.5% of the population, which is very low compared to other OECD* countries like, for example, the United Kingdom, about 85% of the people have passports, or South Korea, where the proportion is 68%.

Before the COVID-19 pandemic, Japan's number was higher, at about a quarter of the population, but during the pandemic, foreign travel stopped almost , and many people chose not to renew their passports. Even after international travel became possible again, far fewer people in Japan got new passports, compared to other countries.

One reason for this is money. When the yen is weak, traveling abroad is more expensive. Flights, hotels, and shopping in other countries cost more than they did when the yen was stronger.

Culture is important too. In Japan, people tend not to take many consecutive holidays* from work, so there isn't much time for overseas trips. Also, many Japanese are not confident speaking English, so traveling to foreign countries can feel difficult or stressful.

One more big reason is that many Japanese think that they can find everything they want just by traveling inside Japan. The country has plenty of beautiful locations, from the snowy north to the tropical south, and a long and very interesting history. Also, it has good transport and tourist infrastructure*, which makes it easy to book a hotel and drive, or catch a train or a plane, to anywhere across the country.

Japan's passport may be the best in the world, but for many Japanese, the best vacations, cheap and stress-free, can be found without ever leaving Japan.

(注) *visa = ビザ (出入国の査証)

*OECD = 経済協力開発機構

*tourist infrastructure = 観光インフラ
